To Rev. Samuel May Jr.

[Sterling, Mass.] The writer deplores the attempts of certain individuals to represent themselves as Abolitionists when they were in fact pro-Slavery partisans. Discusses his early preaching experiences, and tells about one of his first anti-Slavery sermons. Says that Stowe, Vermont was a "nest of pro-Slavery men." Thinks that the Unitarians are missing a great opportunity in the Temperance cause.

New Kent Road (London?). Acknowledges receipt of Liberty Bell; has enjoyed the picture of Hayti, but wishes that land's happily emancipated people "were blessed with the more full and glorious liberty of the Gospel" (i.e. Protestantism). Mrs. Elizabeth Fry has been out of town and out of health. The writer summarizes a letter received from the daughter-in-law of Mrs. Fry expressing the latter's views. Mrs. Fry finds it difficult to write to Mrs. Chapman because she "does not feel clear in her mind about the Boston Anti-Slavery Society." The writer explains that the misrepresentation "that it is not an Anti-Slavery Society only... but one mixed up with other & debatable points... has taken [illegible] firm a hold on the minds of many..." The writer herself [illegible]ors adhering to anti-slavery only and leaving all other questions, such as women's rights.

«London» The writer regrets that John Q. Adams disclaims being an Abolitionist, but thinks that any act on behalf of the slave will advance the Anti-Slavery cause. Is glad to hear that C. L. Remond is so useful. Asks if J. A. Collins deserted the cause. Says she does not wholly agree with Joseph Sturge. "I am sorry to see in a letter of T. Clarkson's he attributes the idea of setting slaves in West Indies free to William Allen ere the term of Apprenticeship expired." Says that Zachary Macauley was the real emancipator. W. To My dear friend" (Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman?)

«Darnley Terrace, Kent» An essay and a letter; the letter occupies the first three pages of No.51. The writer states that she is "too much out of health to write anything," but she is offering a "few reflections." Explains previous statements about American affairs by saying that in England it is found best to unite on an issue, even when differences exist. The writer has a widowed sister in Paris for whom she wishes some interest to arouse her from "useless sorrowing." Expresses sympathy for the addressee. The essay brings out the contrast between the African blacks' treatment of a white stranger and the white man's ens[illegible]ent of the black man; it also brings out the mission of w[illegible] in doing acts of mercy. The writer's friend Elizabeth Fry has been disabled for more than two years, and at times is in great agony; contrary to expectations, she is now better. Recounts the death of Mrs.Fry's son and other members of her family. Mrs.Fry is not likely to "be able to take her valuable station again." The writer notes that Mrs.Fry could not understand the conflicting accounts she received of American abolitionism. The writer had "a sweet bright little note"from Thomas Clarkson, who is "rejoicing that the Gospel [illegible]ow spreading in Africa." .New Kent Road (London?). In reply to the addressees' query, the writer explains the English custom of cooperating in philanthropic enterprises, without making particular religious affiliations a condition. Discourses on the importance of free labor industries in furthering the suppression of slavery. Cotton manufacturers wish to get free labor cotton from India and not to depend on America. The Association for the Civilization of Africa uses only such measures as the writer, "a friend & lover of peace can cordially unite with." The natives are to be encouraged to raise cotton "to supersede slave grown cotton of America." The writer expla[illegible] the treatment in England of John A. Collins. To Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman No.125

[4 Court St. Boston] "It may not be deemed expedient for the bar to adopt a rule according to which each member shall refuse his professional assistance to reclaim a fugitive slave." But the writer is not without hope that such a rule will be promulgated. "I shall sign it, vote for it & rejoice in it..." The writer, in default of any contribution of his own to the Liberty Bell, sends a letter from Samuel Gridley Howe, which contains "a most harrowing sketch of a scene which he witnessed in a Southern prison." Dr. Howe was visiting New Orleans for the purpose of interesting the legislature of Louisiana in the education of the [illegible]d. He viewed the prison in company with a slave-holder, [illegible] hoped Dr. Howe would not
